LL.M. IN ALTERNATIVE DISPUTE RESOLUTION

Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR) has gained impetus in the latter half of the 20th century. Provisions in municipal laws, across jurisdictions, have enabled the courts to direct the parties to choose their preferred way of resolving disputes (given an express agreement or intention to do so). As such, it might be correct to state that adjudication by courts becomes an alternative to a dispute resolution system agreed by the parties. Dispute resolution clauses in bilateral agreements and private contracts have evolved to cater pre- and post-dispute settlement through arbitration, mediation, negotiation, or conciliation. To this end, the Singapore Convention or the recent codification of pre-litigation mediation, specifically in commercial matters, has created a demand for specialists in alternate modes of dispute resolution. Thus, the growing significance of various alternative dispute resolution mechanisms, in both commercial as well as non-commercial matters, is undeniable. This specialisation will provide the necessary skill sets to the students to meet the ever-growing demand for specialists in the ADR fraternity and contribute towards developing the jurisprudence in this field, as lawyers, adjudicators, or academics.

LL.M. IN CONSTITUTIONAL AND ADMINISTRATIVE LAW

In the broadest sense our constitution is the common thread that binds every other area of law and provides a system of checks and balances. It is the fundamental protector of people's rights and what many lawyers consider to be the legal bible. The ability and imagination of a lawyer is expanded by and limited to the values enshrined in the constitution, the "higher law". That's why constitutional law is pursued in legal circles with great reverence.

The LL.M. in Constitutional and Administrative Law offers post graduate students a deeper dive into the most relevant constitutional discourse in India and abroad. The programme will equip students to understand the role of the constitution in shaping emerging laws and issues ranging from human rights to democracies. The courses under this specialization will offer students a mix of theoretical and empirical perspectives to analysing and understanding constitutional law and enable a nuanced mastery of the subject.

Studying the LL.M at CPGLS was a life changing experience, for me personally. The masters gave me an astonishing platform to enhance and apply my learnings from my previous studies in most analytical and critical manner. To be specific, the intense nature of the curriculum, the wide choices of courses and the international exposure I received from the professors, altogether have played a crucial role in uplifting my career. Looking back, I am so happy that I made the choice of joining CPGLS and I highly recommend the master's programme to all the law students who are looking for the rich international exposure which CPGLS provides. Class of LL.M. ▶ 2018-2019

CPGLS is a place full of diversity and inclusiveness. As an international student, I have received a lot of help from my teachers, faculties and classmates, so I can well integrate here. The most amazing thing was I met many famous experts here and I listened to a lot of lectures by them at close range. This greatly broadened my horizons. At class, professors not only taught legal knowledge, but also included the legal research methodology, the use of advanced software, writing skills, career development and other comprehensive education. These have benefited me for life.
