Bhakti-Sufi Poetry
for a Fractured World

Make Poetry, Make Peace: A Bhakti-Sufi Poetry Writing Workshop

Please join us as we take inspiration from the words and music of Bhakti-Sufi poets like Kabir, Bulleh Shah and Mirabai about ideas of unity, peace and coexistence, and write our own poems to help heal the religious fractures of our times! Guided by Rachit Sharma from Dillipoetry, the workshop will help you shape your thoughts and experiences into short poems or couplets, whether in Hindi, Urdu, Punjabi, English or any language you feel at home in.

You don't need to be a poet to join this workshop. It is flexible and open to everyone.

We will provide prompts, any necessary support and a safe space to share. Just bring your friend, Curiosity!

About Dillipoetry

Dillipoetry is a literary platform dedicated to de-pedestalizing poetry: making it accessible, experiential and embodied. Over the past three years, Dillipoetry has curated and hosted more than 80+ poetry walks, workshops and training programmes on themes such as religious unity and coexistence, the climate emergency, queer ecology & intimacies, poetry of resistance, romanticism, feminist architecture, neurodivergence, and our relationship with the natural world.

In this time, Dillipoetry has cultivated an intimate community of over 200 local city poets, creating spaces of beauty, reflection, and dialogue—spaces where poetry becomes a way of witnessing, questioning and reimagining the world.

At the heart of their work lies a recurring inquiry: What does it mean to be human in this time, age and crises? Through poetry, we seek not only to articulate this question but to live it, together!
